

Instructor Development

This course is intended not only for those who wish to become instructors of USPS classes, but also for anyone who wants to develop or improve their communication and public speaking skills. The material applies to teaching, public speaking and conducting meetings. You will gain experience in making effective presentations, preparing lessons/lectures, using teaching aids such as overhead projectors and audio/video devices. The course work includes opportunities to sharpen your public speaking skills with an audience of understanding fellow students. A section covering current research on brain function and how the mind learns both short and long-term memory is included both as enrichment and as vital information for those who wish to teach classes.
